AREAS OF PRACTICE

- Common Law
- Commercial Law
- Defamation
- Intentional Torts
- Technology and Media Law

Liz Main has broad experience in common law and commercial law, having previously worked as a judge's associate to their Honours Judges Clayton, Marks and Trapnell across the common law and commercial divisions of the County Court of Victoria.

Her experience traverses the full range of common law proceedings, including intentional torts, negligence, Workcover and TAC matters, with familiarity in jury trials, causes, serious injury applications and interlocutory disputes.

As a former legal affairs journalist for the Australian Financial Review and, most recently, the associate to the Judge in Charge of the Defamation List in the County Court, Liz also has expertise in defamation and media law. She has been at the forefront of recent decisions on the new serious harm element and concerns notice requirements.

Liz has also worked for Slater and Gordon Lawyers where she garnered experience with shareholder and bushfire class actions.

Since 2020, Liz has been an active member of Victorian Women Lawyers' publications committee, including presiding as co-chair for two years.

Liz holds Juris Doctor and Bachelor of Arts degrees from the University of Melbourne.
